Geared Up

Lira Ishida

My name is Lira Ishida, born in 1998 and based in Tokyo, Japan. I am interested in creating concepts and bringing them to life through character designs and sketches. For this project, I've turned my latest concept into an artbook with the goal of transforming it into a cosplay, which is one of my hobbies.

This concept is called "Armored High School Boys," which is a gender-bent version inspired by the popular trend in the military/cosplay community on social media known as "Armored High School Girls" or "Buso JK" (武装 JK, meaning Armed High School Girl). I haven't seen male creators explore this concept of militarized male students, so I wanted to experiment with how the environment would change and how people might respond to a different gender in this trend, given that we've come to accept and understand the female version of armed high school students.

I hope you enjoy the concept and the photos!
